Complaint

Civil Party

I would like to give supplementary information related to crimes committed during the Khmer Rouge regime as the following:

On 15 April 1975, the Khmer Rouge forced my family and me, along with other people from Phnom Penh, to live in Chi Mreak (ជីម្រាក់), Kampeang (កំពែង) Commune, Kiri (គីរី) District.

At the end of 1977, they sent us to live in Trapeang Trav (ត្រពាំងត្រាវ) Village, Trapeang Thum Khang Cheung (ត្រពាំងធំខាងជើង) Commune, Tramkak (ត្រាំកក់) District, Takeo Province. About five months later, my Team Leader, named Pon (ប៉ុន) (“in the VIF, he is called Bon”), told me to attend a meeting. Then a person named Sē (សែ) (“In VIF he is called Seng”) arrested me and tied me up. He sent me to a prison (the name is unknown) in Trapeang Thum Khang Cheung Commune for three months. At the prison, both my feet were shackled, and so were the other 100 prisoners. Later, I was released by the Khmer Rouge to work (carry buckets of water) at the prison. During that time, I often saw the Chiefs of the Prison, named Mēng (ម៉េង), Chhoeung (ឈឿង) and Nau (ណូ), tie five prisoners up and send them to be killed on Damrei Romiel (ដំរីរមៀល) Mountain west of Krang Ta [illegible] (ក្រាំងតា...). They did that every two or three days. Some of the prisoners I saw were Kǎn (កាន់), Bīn (ប៊ិន) and Meuk (ម៉ុក), who used to live in my village.

At the end of 1978, my niece, named IEM Peou (អៀម ពៅ), who is currently living in the same village, was forced by the Khmer Rouge to marry Chheam (ឈឹម), whom she had never met. The couple matching ceremony was in Trapeang Trav (ត្រពាំងត្រាវ) Village, Trapeang Thum Khang Cheung Commune, Tramkak District, Takeo Province.

My nephew, named CHĂO Ngăn (ចៅ ងាន់), married a Vietnamese in Pou (ពៅធី) Village, Angkeu (អាងគី) Commune, Tin Bieng (ទិន បៀង) District, Ang Yang (អាងយ៉ាង) Province. In April 1978, the Khmer Rouge gathered them to live in Kampeang Village. One month later, they took my nephew's wife, along with the other approximately 50 Vietnamese, to be killed in Our Ansa (អូរអន្សា) Village, Kouk Prech (គោកព្រៃថ្ម) Commune, Kiri Vong District, Takeo Province.
