I. PROCEDURAL HISTORY

1. Disagreements between the Co-Investigating Judges (“CIJs”) in Case 004 were registered on 22 February 2013, 5 April 2013, 21 October 2015, 16 January 2017, and 21 January 2019.
2. Since the opening of the judicial investigation in Case 004, 2,014 people have applied to become civil parties in Case 004.
3. On 29 April 2011, the CIJs declared inadmissible the civil party applications of Robert Hamill and Seng Chantheary.¹ The applicants appealed the CIJs’ orders.²
4. On 14 and 28 February 2012, the Pre-Trial Chamber (“PTC”) was unable to reach the required majority to decide on the appeals by both applicants.³
5. On 15 November 2011, Seng Chantheary withdrew her application from Case 004.⁴ The Greffier of the Office of the Co-Investigating Judges (“OCIJ”) acknowledged this by letter on 29 May 2014.⁵
6. On 30 December 2011, Robert Hamill requested the CIJs to reconsider their order on his admissibility as a civil party.⁶ The CIJs did not issue a new order on his admissibility. In this Order, I issue my decision on Robert Hamill’s admissibility as a civil party.
7. On 1 May 2012, the Reserve International CIJ granted civil party status to 30 applicants.⁷ In this Order, I will reassess and, if necessary, reconsider the findings of the Reserve International CIJ in light of the advancement of the investigation.

8. In the course of the investigations into Cases 003, 004, 004/1, and 004/2, the OCIJ was informed that 47 applicants to Case 004 are deceased.⁸ The successor of one deceased applicant has expressed the wish to continue the action on behalf of the deceased.⁹ Three applicants have withdrawn their applications.¹⁰
9. In the course of the investigations into Cases 003, 004, 004/1, and 004/2, the OCIJ has interviewed a number of Case 004 applicants and the Trial Chamber (“TC”) has heard Case 004 applicants in Cases 002, 002/1, and 002/2. The records of these OCIJ interviews and transcripts of the TC hearings will be referenced in the annexes to this Order.
10. On 30 November 2016, 31 January 2017, and 7 April 2017, I ordered legal representation for all Case 004 applicants,¹¹ and additional powers of attorneys have been placed on the Case File since. As a result, all civil party applicants have legal representation.
11. On 28 April 2017, I rejected all requests for protective measures by civil party applicants in Case File 004.¹² On 11 May 2017, the application of one civil party applicant (“Requesting Applicant”) requesting protective measures was filed.¹³ In this Order, I will take a decision on this request.

II. DISCUSSION

A. Introduction

12. In this Order, I outline the legal principles and criteria that I have applied in determining the admissibility of civil party applications in Case 004. In the annexes to this Order, I set out my conclusions on admissibility in respect of each individual applicant, providing reasons as to why each application is or is not admitted.

B. Guiding principles

13. In order for a civil party application to be admissible, the applicant must be clearly identified and must demonstrate that, as a direct consequence of at least one of the crimes alleged against a charged person, he or she has in fact suffered physical, material, or psychological harm upon which a claim of collective and moral reparation might be based.¹⁴ The admissibility of civil party applicants is based on an assessment of their personal circumstances in respect of the allegations, accepting those allegations at face value.¹⁵
14. The Internal Rules and the Practice Direction on Victim Participation set out the basic principles in relation to civil party participation and admissibility. In accordance with the ECCC Law,¹⁶ where there is uncertainty regarding the interpretation or application of these basic principles, guidance may be sought in procedural rules concerning victims established in international law, which include, but are not limited to:
- a. Case law from relevant international and regional human rights courts and tribunals; and
 - b. Articles 1, 2, 4, and 18 of the United Nations General Assembly, Declaration of Basic Principles of Justice for Victims of Crime and Abuse of Power.¹⁷
15. The Supreme Court Chamber (“SCC”) rightly observed that regional human rights courts are focused on “state responsibility” as opposed to “individual criminal responsibility”. Accordingly, I have taken a careful approach in applying case law from the regional human rights courts to the admissibility decision, in recognition of the fact that these courts are necessarily “animated by different policies than the ECCC”.¹⁸
16. Given that Internal Rule 23 bis (1) and Article 3.2 of the Practice Direction on Victim Participation echo Article 13 of the 2007 Cambodian Code of Criminal Procedure, which itself is inspired by and closely resembles Article 2 of the French Code of Criminal Procedure, it may also be useful to look at the general principles on victims found in French law.

C. Type of victims and their admissibility as civil parties

i. Direct victim

17. A direct victim (sometimes referred to as an “immediate” or “primary” victim)¹⁹ refers to the “category of persons whose rights were violated or endangered by the crime charged”.²⁰
18. In case of death of a direct victim, a civil action may be pursued on behalf of deceased applicants by their successors.²¹ The Cambodian Code of Criminal Procedure provides that a civil action may be started or continued by the victim’s successor.²² While the TC ruled that successors could only act on behalf of the deceased if the deceased had already filed an application,²³ this runs contrary to the Cambodian Code of Criminal Procedure and the SCC deemed this limitation without basis in the applicable law.²⁴
19. Thus, when a direct victim dies, the successors have two ways to participate: either on behalf of the deceased; or in their own name, as indirect victims, for the harm they suffered as a consequence of the direct victim’s injury.²⁵ Either way, the applicant must expressly state whether he or she applies as a successor on behalf of a direct victim or as an indirect victim.

ii. Indirect victim

20. In addition to direct victims, persons who “personally suffered injury as a direct result of the crime committed against the direct victim” may also apply to be civil parties as indirect victims.²⁶ The SCC found that “[t]he exercise of the rights of indirect victims is autonomous of the rights of the direct victims”.²⁷ Indirect victims may therefore be granted civil party status even if the direct victim does not apply for civil party status.²⁸

iii. Perpetrator-victim dichotomy

21. Civil party applications of persons who have contributed to the perpetration of the offence they claim to be victims of will be declared inadmissible. While it is recognised that perpetrators may suffer trauma as a result of their own participation to international offences,²⁹ they cannot be admitted to file a civil party application against other alleged perpetrators of the same offences.³⁰ This is the case in particular where the circumstances were not “beyond [the victim-perpetrator’s] control”.³¹

D. Type of harm

22. In order to have standing, an applicant must have suffered actual harm.³²
23. Internal Rule 23 bis (1)(b) provides that, in order for an application to be admissible, the injury must be physical (i), material (ii), or psychological (iii).

i. Physical harm

24. According to the SCC, physical harm “denotes biological damage, anatomical or functional. It may be described as a wound, mutilation, disfiguration, disease, loss or dysfunction of organs, or death.”³³
25. The Pre-Trial Judge of the Special Tribunal for Lebanon considered that physical harm “involv[es] the body” and “ordinarily requir[es] a degree of medical treatment for the victim.”³⁴ The SCC further elaborated that physical harm may be suffered by “the vulnerable, such as infants, children and the old and sick, whose caregivers were taken away from them.”³⁵ It may also result from prolonged psychological injury that causes various ailments.³⁶

³² Internal Rule 23 bis (1)(b); Practice Direction on Victim Participation on Victim Participation, Article 3.2 (b) (ii). The terms “harm” and “injury” are considered interchangeable and not legally distinct in this context. The French version of the Internal Rules uses one word throughout the document, and the Khmer version features two different words, which are also used interchangeably (“ព្រះសន្តិភូមិ” and “ខ្លួនខ្លាច”): Case File No. 002-D404/2/4, Decision on Appeals against Orders of the Co-Investigating Judges on the Admissibility of Civil Party Applications, 24 June 2011 (“Case 002 Decision on Appeals”), paras 44-49; Case 001 Appeal Judgement, para. 415.

³⁵ Case 001 Appeal Judgement, para. 417.

³⁶ Case 001 Appeal Judgement, para. 417.

ii. Material harm

26. The SCC considered that material harm “refers to a material object’s loss of value, such as complete or partial destruction of personal property, or loss of income.”³⁷ While material harm is defined as a material loss, the SCC and PTC also took into account the impact of the Communist Party of the Kampuchea (“CPK”) policy on the family unit, as well as the way in which elderly and vulnerable family and community members were provided and cared for.³⁸
27. In particular, the SCC held that such injury may be constituted where the “direct victim was providing [for the indirect victim] at the time [...], or would have, in all probability, provided for [them] in the future.”³⁹ This is for instance the case in a relationship between parents and children.⁴⁰ Thus, material harm can be suffered by both direct and indirect victims.

iii. Psychological harm

28. A significant number of civil party applicants in Case 004 claim to have suffered psychological harm, both as direct and indirect victims.
29. Psychological harm is constituted by distress, mental disorders, psychological or psychiatric trauma including, but not limited to, post-traumatic stress disorder.⁴¹ It can also result from the mere witnessing of shocking or violent events,⁴² or even the emotional distress from recalling such events, even if they occurred thirty years before.⁴³
30. For an indirect victim, psychological harm can result from the death of kin, the uncertainty or fear about a direct victim’s fate, the knowledge of their suffering, or the loss of the sense of safety and moral integrity.⁴⁴
31. In this respect, the criterion of “special bond of affection or dependence” to the direct victim is of relevance in determining the existence of psychological harm,⁴⁵ and psychological harm may be constituted as a result of harm suffered by distant relatives, or even simply friends.⁴⁶
32. The PTC even found that psychological harm may stem from events involving people from the same community, who relied on each other to survive.⁴⁷ It found that an injury should be measured in the context of collective damage caused to the whole society, or directed parts of society, rather than in respect of individuals alone.⁴⁸

⁴⁶ Case 001 Appeal Judgement, para. 418.

⁴⁷ Case 002 Decision on Appeals, paras 86, 88, 91. This finding is in line with international and regional case law. See for instance Human Rights Committee, Toonen v. Australia, no. 488/92, 31 March 1994, para. 5.1; ECtHR, Norris v. Ireland, no. 10581/83, 26 October 1988, paras 29, 32-34; IACHR, Suarez Rosero v. Ecuador, 12 November 1997, para. 98.

33. Hence, mass crimes perpetrated against groups or large portions of the population in a widespread manner may also affect other nationals of the same country, whether present or absent. Such crimes may even affect people born after the facts, for instance through accounts told by direct or indirect victims.⁴⁹
34. Therefore, psychological harm encompasses harm suffered by a direct victim as a direct result of a crime, or by an indirect victim as a result of the crimes committed against, or the harm suffered by, a direct victim. Indirect victims may suffer such harm regardless of the absence of a familial relationship with the direct victim where they were both members of the same targeted group or the same community, or where the indirect victim was otherwise affected by the harm suffered by the direct victim.

E. Existence of a causal link

35. Internal Rule 23 bis (1)(b) requires, consistently with international standards,⁵⁰ the existence of a causal link between the harm suffered and at least one of the crimes alleged against the charged person.
36. The PTC, taking into account the nature of the crimes and modes of liability within the jurisdiction of the ECCC, interpreted the causal link requirement broadly, and allowed for the admission of applicants whose alleged harm did not necessarily stem from crimes committed specifically in the locations identified in the OCP submissions, or in the Closing Order. In particular, it took into account the broad nature of the alleged crimes against humanity and genocide allegations, as well as the scope of the Joint Criminal Enterprise (“JCE”) in Case 002.⁵¹

F. Admissibility of civil party applicants

37. Based on the Closing Order against Yim Tith, applicants who have suffered harm in the Northwest Zone from early 1977 until at least 6 January 1979 satisfy the causal link requirement in the presence of two conditions:
- a. Firstly, the harm suffered by the applicant derives from the alleged implementation of one or more of the following policies, at any location within the Northwest Zone:
 - i. the establishment and operation of cooperatives and worksites, implemented through the enslavement of the population;

⁴⁸ Case 002 Decision on Appeals, para. 68.

⁴⁹ See Prosecutor v. Katanga, Decision on the Matter of the Transgenerational Harm Alleged by Some Applicants for Reparations Remanded by the Appeals Chamber in its Judgment of 8 March 2018, 19 July 2018, ICC Trial Chamber II, (ICC-01/04-01/07), para. 10. I note that due to the different framework of victim participation before the ECCC, especially at the investigation stage, there is no need to make such a strict determination of causality yet. The proper avenue for the civil party applicants to plead this particular issue in more detail is at the trial stage.

⁵⁰ See Prosecutor v. Lubanga, Decision on the requests of the Prosecutor and the Defence for Suspensive Effect of the Appeals against Trial Chamber I's Decision on Victim's Participation of 18 January 2008, ICC Appeals Chamber (ICC-01/04-01/06-1347), para. 18; Kony Decision, paras 36, 38.

- ii. the regulation of marriage, implemented through, inter alia, forced marriage of the inhabitants in the Northwest Zone;
 - iii. the re-education of so-called 'bad elements' through imprisonment, forced labour, and subjection to inhumane conditions, or the killing of 'enemies' and 'bad elements' both inside and outside the CPK ranks; and
 - iv. the targeting of specific groups.
- b. Secondly, the alleged implementation of these policies may have amounted to:
- i. genocide as listed in Article 4 of the ECCC Law;
 - ii. one or more of the crimes against humanity listed in Article 5 of the ECCC Law; or
 - iii. one of the domestic crimes listed in Article 3 new of the ECCC Law;
 - iv. and that any such crime or crimes may be imputable to Yim Tith.

38. Three additional categories of applicants satisfy the nexus requirement.

- a. Firstly, those applicants who have suffered harm as a consequence of the charged nation-wide common plan, alleged from at least 1976 until 6 January 1979, to eliminate the Khmer Krom, in whole or in part. Those applicants satisfy the causal requirement if the evidence indicates that they have been victims of:
- i. genocide as listed in Article 4 of the ECCC Law;
 - ii. one or more of the crimes against humanity listed in Article 5 of the ECCC Law; or
 - iii. one or more of the grave breaches of Geneva Conventions listed in Article 6 of the ECCC Law;
 - iv. one of the domestic crimes listed in Article 3 new of the ECCC Law;
 - v. and that any such crime or crimes may be imputable to Yim Tith.⁵²
- b. Secondly, any applicant who has suffered harm as a consequence of any of the following crimes alleged at Wat Pratheat Security Centre between at least September-October 1975 until 6 January 1979. Those applicants satisfy the causal requirement if the evidence indicates that they have been victims of:
- i. genocide as listed in Article 4 of the ECCC Law;
 - ii. one or more of the crimes against humanity listed in Article 5 of the ECCC Law; or
 - iii. one of the domestic crimes listed in Article 3 new of the ECCC Law;

⁵² D281, Written Record of Initial Appearance of Yim Tith, 9 December 2015, ERN 01205491.

- iv. and that any such crime or crimes may be imputable to Yim Tith.⁵³
 - c. Finally, any applicant who has suffered harm as a consequence of any of the following crimes alleged at Wat Pratheat Security Centre, Kraing Ta Chan Security Centre, Preil Village Execution Site, Wat Angkun Execution Site, Slaeng Village Forest Execution Site, or Prey Sokhon and Wat Ang Serei Munny Execution Site:
 - i. genocide listed in Article 4 of the ECCC Law;
 - ii. one or more of the crimes against humanity listed in Article 5 of the ECCC Law;
 - iii. one or more of the grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions listed in Article 6 of the ECCC Law; or
 - iv. one of the domestic crimes listed in Article 3 new of the ECCC Law;
 - v. and that any such crime or crimes may be imputable to Yim Tith.⁵⁴
39. Facts excluded on the basis of Internal Rule 66 *bis*⁵⁵ alleged by civil party applicants may still form the basis of a decision of admissibility, should they fulfil the above and below conditions.

G. Standard of proof and sufficiency of information

40. Civil party applications must contain sufficient information to allow verification of their compliance with the Internal Rules.⁵⁶ The CIJs must be satisfied that facts alleged in support of the application are more likely than not to be true.⁵⁷ In particular, the Victim Information Forms (“VIFs”) and statements made by the applicants must contain the necessary degree of particularity and authenticity to make them credible in the circumstances of the case.⁵⁸ The VIFs and related documents must be complete and generally consistent.⁵⁹ I therefore apply a probability standard in assessing the claims of civil party applicants. In assessing the statements made by civil party applicants in support of their claims, I lend increased credibility to such statements given the lack of individual financial interest on the part of victims pursuing their civil actions.⁶⁰
41. Owing to the unique nature of civil party participation before the ECCC and the circumstances of the case, the extent of available evidence that civil party applicants may rely on will be diminished, due to various factors, including:

⁵³ D281, Written Record of Initial Appearance of Yim Tith, 9 December 2015, ERN 01205492.

⁵⁴ D281, Written Record of Initial Appearance of Yim Tith, 9 December 2015, ERN 01205492.

⁵⁵ D359, Decision to Reduce the Scope of Judicial Investigation Pursuant to Internal Rule 66 bis, 13 June 2017.

⁵⁶ Internal Rules, Rule 23 bis (4); Practice Direction on Victim Participation, Article 3.5.

⁵⁷ Internal Rules, Rule 23 bis (1).

⁵⁸ Case 001 Appeal Judgement, para. 536; Kony Decision, paras 35-36, 38.

⁵⁹ Case 001 Appeal Judgement, para. 536.

⁶⁰ Case 001 Appeal Judgement, para. 536.

- a. The passage of time, and the effect that this may have on an applicant's ability to provide documentary evidence in regards to harm suffered, including medical records where physical harm is alleged;⁶¹
- b. The capacity, following DK, to extensively and accurately identify, respond, or record the impact that the conditions of DK had on the psychological health of the population;
- c. The evacuation, movement, and resettlement of the population in different regions, and the effect that this had on an applicant's ability to provide proof of ownership where loss of property is alleged, and the ability to provide proof of income where loss of income is alleged.

42. These factors mitigate the required degree of proof of harm.

i. Proof of pecuniary damage

43. While the regional human rights courts set high standards for the proof of pecuniary damage,⁶² they provide alternative modes of assessment of such damage when the alleged victim is unable to substantiate their pecuniary claims.⁶³ These courts apply stronger standards because they provide for individual monetary compensation, whereas the ECCC does not.
44. For the reasons set out above and because the ECCC provides only for collective and moral reparations,⁶⁴ it is appropriate to adopt a relaxed approach when considering pecuniary damage allegedly suffered by an applicant, for the purpose of the admissibility finding.

ii. Proof of non-pecuniary damage

45. The SCC upheld the presumption found by the TC that bonds of affection and dependence exist between the direct victim and immediate family members.⁶⁵ In the Cambodian context, due to the specific context of proximity and co-dependence with extended family members,⁶⁶ the social restructuring of DK,⁶⁷ and the practical difficulties to obtain proof of kinship, this presumption needs to be extended to non-immediate family members in order to adopt a flexible approach to proof of kinship.

⁶¹ While the majority did not address these questions, I find the separate opinion of Judge Marchi-Uhel on this point relevant and helpful: Case 002 Decision on Appeals, Separate and Partially Dissenting Opinion of Judge Catherine Marchi-Uhel, para. 66.

⁶² E.g. ECtHR, Practice direction issued by the President of the Court in accordance with Rule 32 of the Rules of Court on 28 March 2007, Article 11: "It is for the applicant to show that pecuniary damage has resulted from the violation or violations alleged. The applicant should submit relevant documents to prove, as far as possible, not only the existence but also the amount or value of the damage".

⁶³ ECtHR, Ipek v. Turkey, no. 25760/94, 17 February 2004, para. 227. See also Akdivar and others v. Turkey, no. 99/1995/605/693, 1 April 1998, paras 16-19; IACHR, Caracazo v. Venezuela, 29 August 2002 (Reparations and Costs), para. 50 (b), (d); Case File No. 001-F13.1.37, Authority 37: REDRESS, "Collective Reparations: Concepts and Principles", filed 2 November 2010, ERN 00620529.

⁶⁴ Internal Rule 23 quinquies.

⁶⁵ Case 001 Appeal Judgement, para. 448.

⁶⁶ Case 001 Trial Judgement, para. 643; Case File No. 001-E1/68.1, Transcript of Hearing on the Substance in Case 001 [Kaing Guek Eav alias DUCH], 25 August 2009, ERN 00970988, lines 23-25, ERN 00970989, lines 1-3, ERN 00371000, lines 10-19. Note that, according to the French and Khmer versions, ERN 00370988, line 24 should read "together", as opposed to "separately."

⁶⁷ Case 002 Decision on Appeals, paras 70, 90.

46. I have decided to adopt a broad approach to non-pecuniary damage. In the present case, the nature, width, and gravity of the crimes alleged and charged is such that their psychological impact on victims can only be presumed to have been heavy. This is in line with the case law of regional human rights courts.⁶⁸

iii. Proof of identity

47. All civil party applications must contain details allowing verification of the applicant's status as a Victim.⁶⁹ To this extent, the OCIJ has reviewed thumbprints and identifying documents contained in each VIF and the documents attached or appended to it.

48. However, I accept the PTC's finding that "statements issued in a form or other from the village elder or the communal chief"⁷⁰ are enough to establish the applicants' identities. I also accept that, where the copy of the identity card or the thumbprint is missing, it is sufficient if the applicant can be identified via the data contained in the VIF.

III. ON THE REMAINING REQUEST FOR PROTECTIVE MEASURES

49. The Requesting Applicant is a resident of the United States. In the protective measures request contained in her application, she stated that she feared "the current government will come after [her]", and did not specify the type of protective measure she was seeking.⁷¹ The Requesting Applicant does not provide reasons for her fears of the current Cambodian government. The request is thus too vague to warrant protective measures.

⁶⁸ ECtHR, Peck v. United Kingdom, no. 44647/98, 28 January 2013, para. 118; IACHR, Ituango Massacres v. Colombia, 1 July 2006, para. 384; Caracazo v. Venezuela, 29 August 2002, para. 50 (e).

⁶⁹ Practice Direction on Victim Participation, Article 3.5 (a).

⁷⁰ Case 002 Decision on Appeals, para. 95.

⁷¹ D5/2008, Civil Party Application of Sun Chhivhong, 15 February 2017, ERN 01480116.

FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS, I:

- 50. DECLARE all civil party applications listed in Annex A admissible;
- 51. DECLARE all civil party applications listed in Annex B inadmissible;
- 52. DECLARE that the civil party applications and related documents listed in Annex C are to be considered as complaints; and
- 53. REJECT the request for protective measures made by the Requesting Applicant.

This decision is filed in both English and Khmer, with translation of the annexes in Khmer to follow.
